Growth triggers move for Dayton-based firm

MIAMI TWP., Ohio – A Dayton-based architectural and engineering firm recently opened a new office in response to growth and expansion in the region.

CESO, which provides services in branding, interiors, architecture, survey, environmental and civil engineering, relocated its Dayton-area office to Austin Landing.

In addition to growth, the company said a move south of Dayton puts CESO in a better position to access more talent in surrounding communities.

CESO's latest growth follows a long trend of the company's evolution. Starting with a staff of just three people in 1987, CESO now employs 150 across 9 offices in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Tennessee, Florida, West Virginia, and Arkansas. CESO continues to hire in all its offices.

"The accessibility to the deep talent pool in the Cincinnati-Dayton area allows for our continued growth in the region," said CESO President Steve Olson. "Without a doubt, I believe this move represents our continued commitment to current and future customers and employees."

The new 15,700 square foot office was designed with internal collaboration of some of CESO's newer services including branding and interiors.

A May 17th ribbon cutting and open house included tours of the new space.

About CESO:

From our Engineering roots in 1987, CESO has expanded into a multi-disciplined practice of over 150 teammates. Our collaborative approach helps to bring brands, buildings, and landscapes to life. With 9 offices across the country, our growth is a direct result of the energy we invest in finding quality team members who have a genuine desire to serve others. A comprehensive set of capabilities enables CESO to create brands, buildings and experiences that drive business results.
